True Women of the West

Let's face it. Women of the West are a breed apart. Whether they are born here or arrive later, they seem to have a spirit that just comes with the territory. Call it part drive, part resourcefulness, part staying power, but more than anything else, it's a force to be reckoned with. One that has put women at the heart of all that has happened in the West from the beginning...and at the heart of all that has happened at our museum...nearly from the beginning.

Bucking up in the early years.

As it turns out, it all began with a rescue. In 1974, a devastating fire destroyed the original Desert Caballeros Western Museum and all appeared to be lost. That's when founder H.K. "Mac" MacLennan came up with the idea of asking Wickenburg women to help raise funds and provide volunteers. It didn't take long for the fledgling women's group to buck up. Between fiestas and fundraisers, the Museum practically rose from the ashes overnight, eventually becoming one of the most respected in the Southwest.

Proving that women count.

From the 15 women who initially gathered as charter directors, Las Senoras is today an awe-inspiring organization of more than 150 members. Its mission? As in the early days, it is to come to the aid of the Museum. Each year, Las Senoras presents the Museum with the fruits of its labors—a generous check to be used for everything from paint to payroll.

What's in store when you join.

Wouldn't you like to know that by donating a little time you could donate millions? That is exactly what Las Senoras members have done for their Museum over the years.

Home on the range.

Over the years, the Las Senoras Annual Home Tour and Holiday Market have become a tradition, and not just for Wickenburg residents but for those who live throughout the Valley of the Sun. The day is also an anticipated tradition for Las Senoras members who look forward to providing this very popular annual peek into how our part of the West is lived.

Unbridled friendship, too.

Genuine friendship is at the heart of Las Senoras. And now you are invited to be a part of it. All it takes is saying, "Howdy!"
